

ShopEase Shipping & Delivery Policy

Customer Support Knowledge Base | Policy Version 1.0 | September 2026

1. Overview

ShopEase provides delivery services through its own fulfillment network and approved shipping partners. Delivery options and estimated dates depend on the destination, product, seller, inventory location, carrier capacity, and selected shipping service.

The delivery estimate shown at checkout or in the customer's order details should be treated as the primary estimate for that order.

2. Shipping Methods

- Standard delivery
- Express delivery where available
- Scheduled delivery for eligible products or locations
- Carrier-specific services shown during checkout

3. Delivery Estimates

Delivery estimates are calculated using the customer's delivery address, product availability, handling time, carrier service, and other operational factors.

An estimated delivery date is not always a guaranteed delivery date. Weather, carrier disruptions, public holidays, customs, address problems, and unexpected operational events can affect delivery.

4. Order Processing

After an order is placed, ShopEase may need time to verify payment, allocate inventory, prepare the product, and hand the package to a carrier.

An order can therefore remain in a processing or preparing-to-ship status before tracking becomes available.

5. Tracking

Once a shipment is handed to the carrier, tracking information may become available in the customer's order details.

Tracking events can include label created, picked up, in transit, arrived at facility, out for delivery, delivery attempted, and delivered.

Tracking information may take some time to update after a carrier receives the package.

6. Delayed Deliveries

A delivery is considered delayed when it has passed the expected delivery window without being delivered.

Customers should first check the latest tracking event and confirm that the delivery address is correct. If tracking has not updated for an extended period, support may investigate with the carrier.

7. Failed Delivery Attempts

A carrier may be unable to deliver because the recipient is unavailable, the address cannot be located, access is restricted, or the carrier requires additional information.

The carrier may make another attempt, hold the package at a facility, or return the package to the sender depending on the service and local rules.

8. Incorrect Address

Customers should verify their address before completing an order. If the order has not shipped, an address change may sometimes be possible.

After shipment, address changes may not be possible because the package is controlled by the carrier. Customers should contact support promptly if an address error is discovered.

9. Lost Packages

If tracking indicates that a package is lost or remains in transit beyond a reasonable period, ShopEase may open an investigation with the carrier.

Depending on the result, the customer may receive a replacement, refund, or another resolution under the applicable order terms.

10. Package Marked Delivered but Not Received

Customers should first check around the delivery location, with household members, building reception, neighbors, or other authorized recipients.

If the package still cannot be located, the customer should contact ShopEase support promptly. Support may review delivery evidence and carrier records before determining the next step.

11. Damaged Package

Customers should inspect delivered packages when possible. If the package is visibly damaged and the product inside is also damaged, the customer should report the issue and provide photographs when requested.

Packaging damage alone does not always mean that the product itself is damaged. The product condition should be evaluated separately.

12. Missing Items

If an order contains multiple products, items may sometimes be shipped separately. Customers should check the order details and tracking information before reporting an item as missing.

If the order shows that all items were delivered but a product is missing, support should investigate the shipment records.

13. International Shipping

International shipments may be subject to customs processing, import requirements, duties, taxes, and destination-specific restrictions.

Customs delays are outside ShopEase's direct control. Delivery estimates for international orders may therefore be less predictable than domestic estimates.

14. Shipping Fees

Shipping charges depend on the destination, delivery speed, product, order value, seller, and promotional eligibility.

The applicable shipping charge should be displayed during checkout before the customer confirms the order. Some orders may qualify for free standard delivery under promotional or account-specific terms.

15. Frequently Asked Questions

How can I track my order? Open My Orders, select the order, and view the shipment tracking information when it is available.

Why has my tracking not updated? Carrier scans can take time to appear. If there is no meaningful update for an extended period, support can investigate.

Can I change my delivery address? Sometimes, if the order has not shipped. Address changes may not be possible after the package is handed to the carrier.

What if my package says delivered but I do not have it? Check the delivery location and nearby authorized recipients, then contact support if the package remains missing.

What if my package arrives damaged? Report the damage promptly and keep the packaging and product available for inspection.

Will my delivery definitely arrive on the estimated date? Estimated dates are targets rather than universal guarantees unless the order specifically states a guaranteed delivery service.

16. Delivery Exceptions

Delivery may be affected by severe weather, natural events, carrier disruptions, public holidays, incorrect addresses, customs processing, security restrictions, or other events outside ShopEase's direct control.

When an exception occurs, the customer should use the latest tracking information and any instructions provided by the carrier.

17. Returned-to-Sender Packages

A package may be returned to ShopEase when delivery repeatedly fails, the address is invalid, the package is refused, the recipient does not collect it within the carrier's holding period, or another carrier rule requires return.

Once the package is returned, ShopEase may offer a refund or replacement depending on the circumstances and order terms.

18. Chatbot Guidance

The chatbot should collect the order number, delivery address status, current tracking event, estimated delivery date, and shipment carrier before answering a delivery question.

The chatbot should not promise an exact delivery time unless the order provides a confirmed delivery appointment or guaranteed service. For missing or delayed packages, it should distinguish between a normal transit delay and a package that requires carrier investigation.

19. Policy Priority

This document provides general shipping and delivery guidance. The delivery estimate, carrier information, product-specific terms, seller rules, and order-specific instructions may override general information in this document.
